“ Little Brother...I know you know why I won't be there for your service and I know you are good with that. I hope you heard my conversation with you the night after you passed into a new life. Reflected on so many memories..... I remember when you fell up the steps as a toddler and cut your tongue. I remember when Donnie Brown was swinging a brick on a rope from a tree and knocked you out. I remember when Phyllis got you so mad, you chased her and her finger got slammed in the door. I remember when you ran into the back of Mr. Turners car resulting in a change in direction in your life. I remember you and Fast Eddie carrying that marble smokehouse wall up 3 flights of stairs to my apartment so I could have a coffee table. I remember running into you when leaving a party and you asked me why I was leaving..I told you I just had a feeling something bad was going to happen and you said "That's good enough for me" and turned around and followed me (the party got raided). I remember you coming over on many Christmas Eve's when Stephanie was little and helped put her toys together. I remember you always being at our summer parties and peeing on my azaleas telling me that helps them grow (and yes that isn't an old wives tale). I will take these memories of you and more to my own grave. I am blessed to be your big sister and I take comfort now because you are no longer in pain. I love you Jay.
